WASHINGTON — The Affordable Housing Tax Credit Coalition (AHTCC) announced the winners of the 21st Annual Charles L. “The Edson Awards recognize the Housing Credit’s ability to lift up communities, and this year’s winners remind us just how instrumental the program is,” said Todd Crow, President of the Affordable Housing Tax Credit Coalition. “As the only significant source of funding for affordable housing in the country, the Housing Credit must be protected and expanded so high-quality developments like these can continue to provide families a safe, stable, affordable place to call home.”

The Edson Awards are given by the Affordable Housing Tax Credit Coalition and are named for Charles L. Edson, an affordable housing luminary who was Transition Director for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) on President Carter’s Transition Staff. Mr. Edson served in the Office of the General Counsel at HUD and was for nearly 40 years Co-Editor-in-Chief of Housing and Development Reporter. He is a founding partner of the law firm Lane and Edson, and was later a partner of Nixon Peabody LLP. He now lectures to business and professional organizations and trade associations—many of which he founded—on housing and development.

This year’s judging panel included Jim Chandler, Virginia Housing Development Authority (Chair), Charles L. Edson, Nixon Peabody LLP, Adam Galowitz, State Street Bank and Trust; Bobby Rozen, Washington Council Ernst & Young LLP, and Mark Shelburne, Novogradac & Company LLP.

The Housing Credit is America’s main tool for creating and preserving affordable housing for hardworking families, veterans, people with special needs, seniors, teachers, nurses, firefighters and police officers, among others. Since its creation in 1986, the Housing Credit has represented the best of public-private partnerships, bringing into communities $100 billion in private capital to finance 2.7 million quality affordable apartments, producing or preserving 90,000 to 95,000 homes and supporting 96,000 jobs each year.
